

THIRD FUGITIVE CONVICT IS CAPTURED TODAY

SEN. HARRISON
SUBMITS PLAN
FOR NEW TAXESHe Would Substitute His Scheme For Plan Of Representatives

Washington, June 2—(AP)—A complete substitute for the House plan of taxation to finance the $3,300,000,000 public works section of the industrial recovery bill was laid before the Senate Finance committee today by Chairman Harrison.

Under its provisions, the existing law is strengthened against private bankers and partnerships, as a result of testimony before the Senate committee investigating J. P. Morgan & Co.

Explaining it was his individual plan, Harrison told newspapermen before going into the executive session the substitute would raise $227,000,000 and provide:

A tax on corporate dividends withheld at the source, $70,000,000; Re-enactment of the one-tenth of one per cent capital stock tax, $80,000,000;

Removal of the private bankers' exemption from the capital loss deduction provision of last year's Revenue Act, and denying the individual the right to take up on his personal return the distributive share of any partnership losses, $15,000,000.

Boost Gasoline Tax

Increase of one half cent a gallon in the gasoline tax, $62,000,000.

The Harrison program eliminates the House income tax increases, reduces the House gasoline increase by one quarter of a cent, and changes the corporate dividend tax so it would be collected at the source and thereby save additional administrative expense.

The committee chairman said the public works bond issue required only an annual revenue of $220,000,000 for interest and sinking fund and his program therefore "provides the necessary revenue and allows for a margin of safety about $7,000,000."

Would Revive Tax

In addition to this program, Harrison said he advocated extension for three years beyond July 1, 1934, of the consolidated return provision in the 1932 act whereby corporations and chain stores pay a higher rate of tax when filing consolidated returns than if they made individual returns for subsidiaries.

The capital stock tax which Harrison would re-enact was repealed in 1924 and applies to the net worth of capital stock of corporations.

"The whole purpose of this bill," Harrison told newspapermen, "is to help unemployment and start industries going, and it seems to me industry should help in the program."

He said his plan would make unnecessary any general sales tax, although Republicans, led by Senator Reed (R. Pa.) planned to propose such a levy in place of whatever Democratic program is agreed upon in the committee.

Farm Prices Show
Advance In Month

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—Farm prices in Illinois advanced 25 per cent during the month ending May 15 and averaged the highest since December, 1931, the Illinois and Federal Department of Agriculture reported today.

At mid-May prices were 20 per cent above the average for May 15, 1932, and were 66 per cent of the 1910-14 average.

The Illinois report said grains led the price advance for the month, with corn up from 24 to 36 cents and all grains averaging more than 40 and dairy products 13.

Race Against Time In Illinois
General Assembly With Economy
As Goal Was Under Way Today

BULLETIN

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—The legislature today ordered that the judges to be elected Monday should have their pay cut ten per cent.

Final action was completed in passing four bills to reduce the salaries of Supreme, Circuit and Superior Court Judges, along with elective state officials other than Governor and Lieut. Governor, and with court reporters.

Governor Horner is expected to sign the emergency bills so that they will be effective before Monday's election.

BULLETIN

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—The House today concurred in Senate amendments to two of the four emergency bills reducing salaries of judges to be elected Monday. The votes were 112 to 0 and 113 to 4, more than the two-thirds majority required. Concurrence in the other two bills was expected.

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—A race against time, with economy as the goal, was being staged in the General Assembly today.

Morgan Partner Tells How A

Railroad Declined
Favors Of Morgan

Washington, June 2—(AP)—E. G. Buckland, Chairman of the Board of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, was the man Ferdinand Pecora referred to as refusing for an ethical reason to become a select Morgan customer in one issue of stock.

Pecora, counsel for the Senate investigation committee, said so today after it had been disclosed yesterday that Buckland had declined a suggestion that he buy United Corporation stock at a bargain price, although his name has appeared on Morgan's Alleghany and Standard Brands, Inc., lists of favored buyers.

Buckland, in a letter to Arthur M. Anderson, Morgan partner, on January 16, 1929, said his own company had a contract with the Connecticut Light & Power Company for energy, and that he understood one of the companies the Morgan group intended to acquire was Connecticut Light & Power.

He wrote:

"We are about to open negotiations for future dealings with this company in regard to power requirements, and I feel that I ought not at this time to consider any investment in its securities or in securities of any corporation which may exercise a directing influence. This may seem to you leaning over backwards, but, excuse the paradox—I feel more comfortable in that posture. * * *

Roosevelt Planning
Plea On Home Loans

Washington, June 2—(AP)—President Roosevelt advised Representative Hartley (R. N. J.) today he would call for a moratorium on home mortgage foreclosures as soon as the home loan mortgage bill is approved by Congress.

The measure has passed the House and is now awaiting Senate action. In a letter to Hartley, the President said he would take the same steps toward stopping foreclosures on small homes that he did to check foreclosures on farms immediately after the passage of the farm mortgage bill.

"The moment the bill comes to me for signature, I shall make a public appeal to mortgagees not to foreclose until the machinery can be put into operation," the President's letter said. "My plea seems to be working well in regard to farms."

Barrett Asks For
Cut In His Funds

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—State Auditor Edward J. Barrett today asked the legislature to make an additional reduction of $87,000 in the biennial appropriation for his office.

This brought the total saving for the Auditor to more than $122,000 since the appropriation bill before the Senate previously had been cut $35,000 below the total granted by the 1931 legislature.

In a letter to Senator Harry C. Stitt, Litchfield Democrat, who introduced the bill for the Auditor's appropriation, Barrett said:

State Treasurer John C. Martin recently went before the Appropriations committee voluntarily to show how his expenses could be cut a second time.

Race Against Time In Illinois
General Assembly With Economy
As Goal Was Under Way Today

Rep. James T. Burns, Kankakee Democrat and crusader for economy, pleaded with the senate's Enrolling and Engrossing staff to hurry technical preparation of the three salary reduction bills which the Senate amended and passed late yesterday.

Speaker Arthur Roe requested members of the House to stay in their seats until the bills could be brought from the Senate for concurrence in the amendments.

It was the legislature's first Friday session and many representatives had started to leave for their homes. The House roll calls require 102 affirmative votes, two-thirds of the membership, since the economy bills carry emergency clauses.

Immediate action was vital. If the bills do not become law this week the salary cuts will not affect judges to be elected Monday for six and nine year terms.

The senate early this morning passed a fourth economy bill reducing the maximum salary for Circuit and Superior Judges in Cook county. The vote was 39 to 1. An attempt was being made to hurry this bill to the House while 102 votes were available.

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—The House today concurred in Senate amendments to two of the four emergency bills reducing salaries of judges to be elected Monday. The votes were 112 to 0 and 113 to 4, more than the two-thirds majority required. Concurrence in the other two bills was expected.

Senate Inquiry Into House Of Morgan
Takes Recess

Washington, June 2—(AP)—The Senate investigation of J. P. Morgan & Company was abruptly recessed for the week end today after John W. Davis, counsel for the firm, protested against a question directed at Thomas S. Lamont, junior partner, apparently relating to his income tax return.

Davis objected when Ferdinand Pecora, Senate committee counsel, called Lamont to the stand and asked him about sales of stock December 30, 1930.

"This is not fair play," Davis protested, asserting that Lamont had not been advised he would be questioned about the stocks. When Chairman Fletcher ruled the question was pertinent, Lamont said he did not recall the sales and was directed to look them up over the week end.

After the recess was taken, Pecora refused to reply to questions from newspapermen whether the question had any connection with the question of income taxes.

Previous testimony before the committee had disclosed that the 20 Morgan partners paid a total of only $48,000 income tax in 1930.

During the morning the committee was taken behind the scenes of financial drama of the chaotic days of late '28, by a Morgan partner who told in a matter-of-fact fashion how a few bankers—with $250,000,000 at their fingers—supported the crashing market.

It was a profitable operation, too. George Whitney, the Morgan partner, testified that although loss had been expected, the 1,146,609 shares purchased were sold for $1,067,355 more than the cost, exclusive of interest.

The massive purchases lasted some three weeks. "It ended, as I recall, on November 11," said Whitney quietly while ears were strained throughout the large, crowded room to hear.

Asked To Aid Market. Leading up to his story in answers to Pecora, the witness related how his brother Richard, then vice president and now president of the New York Stock Exchange, had "come to see us first" about doing something to halt price slides on the exchange.

"How much did you buy?" Senator Couzens (R. Mich.) asked.

"We bought 1,146,609 shares," Whitney replied. "At a cost of $137,752,705. We sold out in 1930 for $138,820,060."

"How was the profit divided?" Couzens wanted to know.

"Among us according to participation," Whitney said. "We entered this operation without thought of profit. We expected to take a loss and at one time our book loss was $40,000,000."

"Why did you take such a large loss on Anaconda Mining Corporation?" Couzens asked.

"As I said," Whitney replied, "we sold without reference to profit."

The witness objected to Pecora's use of the word "pool" to describe that transaction.

"We are rather gun-shy of the word, as used colloquially," he smiled.

Six Banks Participated

Out of a steady cross fire of question and answer it developed through Whitney that each of the six participating banks agreed to put up $40,000,000 while Guggenheim Bros., who had a smaller participation, pledged $10,000,000.

The witness fingered a smouldering cigarette as he told of the huge operations of the pool, called "joint suspense account."

J. P. Morgan, senior partner, sat slumped down in a chair in the background as in a matter-of-fact way the witness related details of inside operations of those suspense-ridden days when big elements of the banking community put its weight together in an attempt to save declining prices.

Chairman Fletcher and Morgan, sitting back of him, were both smoking cigars as usual, while Pecora conducted the cross examination for the committee.

Morgan smiled as Pecora referred to the suspense account as a "pool" and Whitney noted objections to that phrase.

Members of the committee dropped in and went out again as the hearing progressed, and the usual capacity crowd listened in silence.

The windows were partially opened to clear the air of the heavy overhanging smoke.

Senator Glass (D-Va.), former critic of the inquiry, was not on hand.

List Personal Loans. The committee today obtained a list of officers and directors of corporations to whom personal loans were extended from 1927 to 1931 inclusive by the powerful bank.

DEATH IN RIVERChicago Boy Drowns
This Noon: A Companion Saved

Bernard Tridante, 19, of Chicago, Dixon state hospital patient and a member of the institution band, was drowned in Rock river this morning about 11:30, and Ralph Scott, another patient and band member, was rescued after sinking below the surface. Both patients were enjoying a picnic with the band along the banks of the river about a half mile east of the power house. They were attended by Director Wallace Smith of this city.

According to early reports, some of the musicians, all patients of the institution, wandered away from the group, removed their clothes and entered the river for a swim. Tridante and Scott were said to have waded out into the river until they were over their depth when they began to struggle. Tridante could not be rescued but other patients who were in the water were able to save Scott from drowning.

A number of clam boats and details from the state hospital force of employees started dragging the river for Tridante's body as soon as the drowning was reported at the office. The victim of the tragedy had been a patient at the institution since 1926, having been committed from Chicago.

In Havana Prison

Havana, June 2—(AP)—Oscar Montalvo, member of the House of Representatives, died today as a result of wounds received in a political fight in the new Cuban Capitol yesterday.

Colonel Felipe Sanchez, retired Army officer, a bystander who was also gravely wounded in the shooting, was receiving treatment in a hospital here today. He was not a participant in the fight.

Mario Cuellar, youngest member of a politically powerful family was held in prison in connection with the shooting, after giving himself up to police.

Montalvo and Sanchez were shot while standing in the Senate conference hall, shortly after legislators finished conferences on an amnesty bill for political offenses.

Witnesses said Cuellar, secretary of Representative-elect Juan Daniel Byrne, accosted Montalvo and asked whether he had written an article attacking the Cuellar family.

They declared Cuellar drew his pistol and fired three times after Montalvo had struck Cuellar with a walking stick. As he fell, witnesses added, Montalvo drew a gun and fired twice. Cuellar was not hurt. It was not determined who fired the bullet which struck Sanchez.

Horner Demands Tax On Entire State To Benefit
Fifty Of Its 102 CountiesAfter Eight Months Rest Of State To Be Given Help

Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—Governor Horner and other Democratic leaders today had decided that revenues from the proposed two per cent sales tax should be paid directly to the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission for the first eight months of the next fiscal year.

At an extended conference with his advisers, including Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, Horner reached an agreement that the sales tax receipts should be allocated by the Relief Commission to the counties which need help in caring for the unemployed.

After the eight months, the money would be turned to the benefit of all counties by wiping out the state tax, which is now 50 cents on each $100 assessed property valuation.

Bills providing for these means of utilizing the two per cent tax on retail selling are to be introduced next week.

Program Decided

The Governor's conference also brought decisions to support the following measures during the final weeks of the General Assembly:

A minimum wage for women and children, to be introduced soon.

Permission for the Chicago Board of Education to issue $400,000 in bonds without a referendum.

Broader power for the Illinois Commerce Commission to reduce utility rates.

Authority for the State Tax Commission to assess the capital stock of all corporations.

Authority for the Chicago Sanitary District to issue bonds and complete its water diversion project.

Reconstruction of slum areas. Stricter regulations for insurance companies.

The legislature will be asked to salvage these bills from its overcrowded calendar, before it adjourns late this month.

No Solons Present. No members of the legislature attended the conference, which Horner said was unofficial and advisory. It started last night and did not break up until early this morning.

The two per cent tax on sales, the Governor believes, would permit complete elimination of the state property tax, after relief needs have been met. The administration is of the opinion that improving business conditions will obviate the necessity of caring for the unemployed after eight months.

Fifty-two counties which have not asked for relief funds from the Emergency Commission would pay the sales tax but receive no benefit from it during the eight month period.

Among party leaders attending the conference were Emmett Wheelan, president of the Cook County Board, and Barnet Hodes, member of the State Tax Commission.

Fast work by the legislature will be necessary if the bills are enacted before July 1 since only three of the major appropriation bills have passed the House and none the Senate.

Caught Late Thursday: Search Hills

BULLETIN
Siloam Spring, Ark., June 2—(AP)—Lewis Bechtel, one of the 11 convicts who escaped from the Kansas penitentiary Tuesday, was captured at noon today at a farm house one and one-half miles from Dripping Springs, Okla. He admitted his identity. Possees were close behind two of his companions.

BULLETIN
Miami, Okla., June 2—(AP)—A posse led by Sheriff Carl Curtis of Delaware county engaged a group of men thought to be fleeing Kansas convicts in a running gun fight in the hills 20 miles south of Jay today. Curtis reported to Sheriff Dee Watters here.

Chelsa, Okla., June 2—(AP)—Scarred by more bullets and a bank robbery, the trails of 11 Kansas prison fugitives twisted anew today through the Oklahoma-Arkansas hill and mountain country, but two escaped Oklahoma convicts were backed again behind bars.

The reckless killers and robbers who broke from the Kansas state penitentiary at Lansing during a Memorial Day baseball game are blamed for killing a Chetopa, Kas., officer; have stolen and commandeered numerous motor cars; held a half dozen men and women as temporary hostages; engaged in running gunfights with manhunters and climaxed their contempt for the law late yesterday with the $2,100 robbery of a Chelsea bank.

Two Killers Caught. Not so elusive were the two convicted killers, Jim Stribling and H. D. Bradbury, who fled from the Oklahoma prison at McAlester late Wednesday with the arms and automobile of a guard. They were caught last night at Stuart, 20 miles west of the penitentiary, by two marshals who surprised them trying to board a train. They had abandoned the guard's motor car on a mountain road.

The trail of one group of the Kansas seems hot several miles northwest of Siloam Springs, Ark., where three auto thieves shot it out Wednesday night with the Police Chief, Bob La Follette. A posse, started a new search over the steep foot trails in that section after three fishermen late last night had reported seeing three armed men making their way along Flint Creek. There are no motor roads in the immediate vicinity.

Earlier in the day another posse had lost the trail two miles from where the fishermen sighted the trio.

Team Work Is Aim
Of Secretary Hull

Abnara S. S. President Roosevelt with American Delegation to the London Economic Conference, June 2—(AP)—Team-work was the aim today as Secretary of State Cordell Hull called the American delegates to their first formal discussion of the problems to be tackled at the London economic conference.

Secretary Hull, who hopes for a "fast-moving conference that will bring quick relief to the world," indicated that the United States program coincides with the agenda of the conference. Points emphasized are currency stabilization, a lowering of trade barriers, higher prices, and resumption of capital movements.

Proposes Aid To
Small Home Owner
Springfield, Ill., June 2—(AP)—A proposed constitutional amendment which would exempt from taxation all homesteads valued at $5,000 or less will be considered at a committee meeting in Chicago Saturday.

Rep. Edwin Bederman, Chicago Republican, is chairman of the committee and author of the proposed amendment. He said the plan was successful in several other states and that it afforded the only genuine relief possible for small home owners.

The committee will meet at the Chicago city hall.

Mechanically-Controlled Air-Plane Is Flying Over Nation
Today With Pilot Passenger

Los Angeles, June 2—(AP)—Lieut. Commander Frank Hawks, flying a robot-controlled 14-cylinder airplane took off from the municipal airport at 7:51 A. M. (CST.) today on a non-stop flight to Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, N. Y. He planned to test the automatic pilot and was not necessarily seeking a record.

The ship left the ground easily in spite of its load of 620 gallons of gasoline which attendants at the airport said would approximate two tons in weight.

Field attendants said the flier probably would turn the machine over to the automatic pilot when he had gained his required altitude. He planned to fly at about 18,000 feet, but had received good weather reports up to 20,000 feet.

The robot pilot was expected to keep the machine on its course within a variation of two degrees—with much more exactness than a human pilot. But Hawks was expected to fly for the most part within the cruising range of around 200.

Hawks said yesterday he would be a passenger-at-ease in the plane with his only official duties those of navigator.

His course lay over the Grand Canyon, south of Pueblo, Colo., north of Kansas City and Indianapolis, over Pittsburgh and into Brooklyn.

Judge Under Fire
For Freeing Negro

Federal Judge James A. Lowell (above), of Boston, Mass., became the target for attack in Congress when he freed a Negro, George Crawford, wanted in Virginia on murder charges, holding that Negroes do not serve on juries in Virginia and that any conviction obtained against the suspect would be reversed by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Paris.—Rare new relics of Napoleon's life on the island of Aix, where he passed the last days of his life in France before going into exile at St. Helena, have come into the possession of the French government.

It has been announced the house where Napoleon lived at Aix will become a national museum.

The familiar painting of Napoleon aboard the British warship Belleophon shows the defeated and disheartened man, who a few days before was still emperor, gazing back upon the island of Aix and the fast-receding coastline of the mainland of France.

Fled in Stage Coaches. Fleeing from Paris after the disaster at Waterloo in 1815, the fugitive emperor sought to escape his pursuers by flight from France. Fast stage coaches rushed him south to the Atlantic coast, but the path to freedom was barred. At every port British men of war lay off the coast waiting to trap the little Corsican who had become a hunted outlaw.

It was June 22 when Napoleon renounced his empire in Paris. A few days later he reached Rochford and crossed to nearby Aix, seeking shelter in a friend's home, July 8, 1815. Before landing at Aix Napoleon had been harbored aboard the French frigate Saale and among the relics in the museum to be opened at Aix is a diary of his life and reflections while hiding aboard the man-of-war.

Surrendered in July. On a day in the middle of July Napoleon left the house at Aix for the last time, surrendering himself to Captain Maitland of the Belleophon. With the ex-emperor on the voyage into exile went his old aide-de-camp, Baron Gaspard Gouraud, who shared the solitude of Napoleon's life on the barren rock in the south Atlantic.

The great-grandson of the aide-de-camp, the present Baron Gouraud, has been responsible for buying the mansion at Aix and presenting it to the nation. With the house he has given to the state many books and other souvenirs of Napoleon, which the baron has collected.

Father Failed in Business.

When this British beauty, whom every one accuses of being every known nationality except her own, first became a manikin, she was a long, lean, lanky girl in her teens, walking the streets for a job. Her father had failed in business. She had a friend who was working at Lucile's in London. The girl told her to try out for a manikin's job that was open.

"Me be a fashion manikin?" she replied. "Why, you know I couldn't. I'm too skinny and I'm not beautiful!" she finished wistfully. The friend insisted and the next day she was on the stage of Lady Duff Gordon's salon with Edward Molyneux, now of Paris fame, as her audience.

"She draped an oriental gown over me," she said, "a gorgeous piece of fabric designed by Molyneux. The very touch of it thrilled me beyond words. I heard him shout through the emptiness of the room, 'Act! Do something with yourself—move around—interpret my dress, be somebody!'"

The keen observer of inborn grace and refinement knew that he had made a "find." His curt, "Very well. You will do," was uttered even more gruffly to hide his exultation.

"Soon after that," continued the famous manikin, "I was sent to Lucile's Paris house with Molyneux."

MORGAN PARTNER
TELLS OF PROFIT
MADE IN MARKET

Secora produced the list. It named E. W. Marland, now Representative from Oklahoma; Robert E. Olds and Frank W. Stearns, friend of the late former President Coolidge, among others.

A suggestion that some of the bargain price stock offered to clients by Morgan & Company went to British royalty and French politicians drew denials by Whitney.

Senator Reynolds (D-NC) asked about disposition of bargain price stock offered to Morgan's Paris and London offices.

"Have you heard that the allotment to your London office was distributed to members of royalty?" "I never heard that suggestion before," Whitney replied.

"Have you heard some was distributed to politicians in France?" "I never heard it and I am content it is not so," Whitney said smiling.

Questioned further, Whitney said he had not heard that some of the stock went to King Albert of Belgium.

Judge Not Involved. Whitney turned now and again to confer with Leonard Keyes, the Morgan Office Manager, who sat near where J. P. Morgan was smoking a cigar in silent attentiveness.

John W. Davis, white-haired, Morgan counsel, sat smiling back of Whitney.

At one point Whitney told the committee the share of bargain price stock allotted by the Morgan house to John W. Kephart, Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice, was paid for by his wife.

Governor Gifford Pinchot, who had demanded Kephart's resignation, telegraphed Secora yesterday, saying the Judge denied accepting the stock for which he had been listed.

Partnership Agreement. He questioned Whitney about it at the outset of the hearing today and the Morgan partner said he understood Mrs. Kephart had paid for the stock.

This new angle shared attention today with significant points in the Morgan partnership agreement, finally made public by the committee yesterday evening. It showed that J. P. Morgan himself has the final word on all vital matters, can oust partners, and fix the amount of money due them, and can even dissolve the firm.

Is It Partnership? Such power concentrated in one man raised the question among the investigators as to whether the banking house should be classed as a partnership for taxation purposes.

Senator Costigan (D-Colo.) raised this issue and it was believed to be among the important angles now under scrutiny at the Department of Justice and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The operation involving two separate lists of customers was a distribution of Johns-Manville stock, in June, 1927. Those classed by the investigators as real insiders obtained 343,750 shares at 47½. The Morgan's purchase price. Others bought 56,200 shares at 57½. Among the latter were understood to be many of the prominent men named on previous lists, Secretary Woodin among them.

Attorney General Cummings himself made known last night the Justice Department was investigating the income tax returns filed by the Morgan partners. It already was known that the Internal Revenue Bureau was examining the long-guarded partnership agreement in connection with the tax payments.

The point at issue as described by investigators is that the agreement may legally constitute an employment contract, rather than a partnership, which would affect deductions allowable under the income tax laws.

While the evidence shows the Morgan partners paid no income tax in 1931 or 1932, and only $46,000 in 1930, testimony was presented yesterday that a total of more than $50,000,000

THE NATURE LOVER'S RIGHTS

Francis G. Blair

I CLAIM the earth as mine.
Though tolls and rents I may not pay
And deeds I may not hold
There never was a legal way
That rights like mine were sold.

These mountains, vales and plains;
These rivers, lakes and seas;
I claim as my domains—
To use as I may please.

I claim the flowers and trees.
No hand can close the daisy's eye
Nor hide the rose's bloom.
No private greed can me deny
Their beauty and perfume.
No landlord's walls can e'er inclose
The elm tree or the pine.
For every tree or shrub that grows
By nature's laws is mine.

I claim the birds as mine.
Those fields that wave with wheat
And corn
To farmer Jones belong;
But not the lark that every morn
Pours forth his golden song.
These songsters of the open ways
From over land and sea
Their plumage and their roundels
They all belong to me.

I claim the skies as mine.
The rising and the setting suns;
The evening playground of the stars.

The course that great Arcturus runs
The gleaming path of Mars;
The moon that silvers sea and world
With artistry divine—
All these and more to have and hold
I claim as ever mine.

League of Women Voters Will Support Peyser Bill

Establishing the United States Employment Service on a permanent basis with its employees chosen under civil service regulations, and with the purpose of having the Federal Service assist in co-ordinating public employment offices throughout the country, it is provided for in the Peyser Bill, H. R.
4559 (Companion to the Wagner Bill, S. 510), now on the House Calendar in Washington, and supported by the Illinois League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Roy C. Jacobson of Chicago, Chairman of the League's Department of Women in Industry, states that if the measure is passed the Federal Service will aid in increasing the usefulness of state public employment offices by prescribing minimum standards of efficiency, promoting uniformity in administrative and statistical procedure, furnishing information on opportunities for employment and maintaining a system for clearing labor between states. The bill calls for Federal and state advisory councils composed of men and women representing employers and employees in equal numbers and the public to formulate policies and insure impartiality and freedom from political influence.

"It is most necessary to plan not only for the present emergency but also for the reconstruction period," continues Mrs. Jacobson. "There will undoubtedly be many unprecedented shifts in centers of industry, and new centers will develop so it is only by a country-wide system that it will be possible to furnish the information as to employment needs and placements between states."

Elks' Third Annual Flower Show Opens Today; Till Sunday

The third annual flower show sponsored by Dixon lodge of Elks, opened at the club house this afternoon to continue through Sunday. The show will be open until late tonight, at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, continuing until late in the evening and on Sunday afternoon from the hours of 1 to 6 o'clock.

The entries are numerous and most beautiful. Iris and peonies predominated the show with generous display of perennials and other seasonable flowers. It was apparent that every available foot of display space would be occupied before the judges began their inspection and awarding of ribbons this afternoon.
The very attractive commercial displays of plants, these being the work of Louis Knief of the Dixon Floral Company and the firm of Zuend & Lohse, both of Dixon.
The committee of ladies in charge of the entries was busy throughout this morning arranging the numerous displays which began arriving at an early hour and continued to be received until noon. The show is highly deserving of a visit of flower lovers and is worthy of the liberal patronage of the general public of Dixon and vicinity.

Buffet Dinner Honors Misses Powell, Hey Last Evening

Last evening at the home of Miss Lucy Bovey, Mrs. Richard Shanks of Beverly Hills, nee Frances Campbell, and Miss Bovey, were hostesses at a most delightful buffet dinner honoring two attractive Dixon brides-to-be, Miss Alice Powell and Miss Beulah Hey. Miss Hey is soon to become the bride of Fred Davis of Polo and Miss Powell is soon to become the bride of Wayne Craggs of Havana.

The decorations for the happy affair last evening were lovely in pink and lavender flowers and candles in the same shades. Presiding in the dining room were the mothers of the hostesses, Mrs.
R. C. Bovey and Mrs. George Campbell. The fifteen girls who enjoyed the evening included the two honored guests, the Misses Beulah Hey and Alice Powell, Miss Margaret Ballou, Miss Maxine Rosenthal, Miss Avis Resek, Mrs. Lois
Wolfe, Miss Jarleth Jones, Mrs.
Dorothy Jane McCoy, Miss Alice
Crandall, Miss Frances Stanbrough,
Miss Helen Murphy, Miss Marion
Duffy and Miss Frieda Davis of Polo, twin sister of Fred Davis; and the two hostesses, Mrs. Shanks and Miss Bovey.

After dinner each bride-to-be was presented with a dozen tea towels, and each guest embroidered her name on each towel, making much merriment and leaving a token of happy reminiscence for each bride to dream over, as she counts her linen in the future.

Then, for further entertainment contract and auction bridge was enjoyed. At contract Mrs. Wayne
Wolfe and Mrs. Dorothy Jane Mc-Coy were awarded favors while Miss Jarleth Jones and Miss Margaret Ballou won favors at auction.

Another delightful feature of the evening was the fact that yesterday was Miss Powell's birthday, although she was very quiet about it, and the girls also celebrated this happy date, and she received a number of pretty tokens and good wishes accompanying the same. Also on reaching her home she found a number of attractive parcels on the porch as a further happy surprise.

The entire evening was one of happiness to the future brides and their friends.

all attending. The next meeting of

Brethren Young People at Lowell Park

Last evening at Lowell park the young people of the Brethren church had a most enjoyable time.
A group of twenty left Dixon with baskets filled with good things and soon after arriving at the park a suitable place for eating was located and two facts were beyond question. They were first that all had good appetites, and second there was plenty of food, so as a consequence all enjoyed a fine dinner.
Games were then played until a late hour. The flooded the ball diamond with a beautiful light, and made a good play ground, where the time quickly passed. At a late hour the class said good night to each other and started for their homes.

Girl Scout Court Of Awards Wednesday So. Central School

The Girl Scout Court of Awards was held Wednesday evening at the South Central School, and was in charge of Mrs. W. R. Hardy, who is local director.

The grade school orchestra played very well under the direction of Miss Margaret Ballou. The meeting was opened, as are all Girl Scout meetings, with the presentation of the colors.

The Girl Scout membership was represented on the stage by the leader of each troop. These girls gave the Scout pledge, Girl Scout promise, their motto, and their slogan.
This was followed by an address by Mrs. Warren J. Potter of Morrison. Mrs. Potter is very active in Girl Scout work, being Secretary of the Great Lakes Region, which is composed of the four states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. She is also on the Regional Camp Visiting Committee and of the Timber Trail Camp Committee, a Chicago camp located in northern Michigan.

Added to these activities Mrs. Potter is Scout Commissioner in Morrison.

Mrs. John Davies, chairman of the Court of Awards introduced Mrs. Potter, who explained the activities and the value of Scouting.
She spoke of the leisure time, educational, recreational and inspirational programs developed scientifically by active Scout workers.

She also spoke of Girl Scouting from the adult point of view—how it builds the spirit of cooperation, home-making and good citizenship.

Mrs. W. R. Hardy then awarded the various badges and in a most impressive way emphasized the seriousness and the responsibility of Girl Scout-hood. The meeting closed in the usual manner with the singing of the Girl Scout taps.

Mrs. Hardy graciously thanked all who had helped make the 1933
Court of Awards a success.

Gardens Hold Lessons for Children

The other day I heard a sermon about the Miracle of the Seed.
And in it the minister said, "A flower you have grown yourself smells far sweeter than all the wonders of a floral show."

If the amazement and pride that older people feel is so exciting when they see the first microscopic bit of green, how must a child feel when the dumb little bits of nothing he puts into the ground smile at him later as blue bachelor-buttons, or pink petunias, or striped morning glories?

Children that have no yards for gardens miss one of the best things in life. It is worse almost than having no space of their own to play in.

Back Yards Have Chanced
Now back yards used to be a combination of sour packed earth, board piles and barrels. At least city yards were. Such places are seldom seen today. It is due partially to assiduous landscape gardeners and nursery growers who have made the prices of seeds, plants, and shrubs so low we can scarcely afford not to buy them. But I believe the propaganda that has done most good is that put out by the Garden Club of America. It has made the high and the low garden minded.

Add to this the welfare gardens, vegetables of course, so popular these last three years. We are now even in our densest cities becoming not only garden, but agricultural and horticultural minded.

It is a grand thing for adults,
but it is a grander thing for children.

the gardener-parent needs to guard

Miss Emma Beier Was Bride of R. G. Bennett Ceremony Thursday

A wedding of much interest to Dixon friends took place Thursday in Rockford which united the lives of Miss Emma Beier, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. Beier, founder of the Beier Bakery company of Dixon, and Roland Garnet Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Bennett, plantation owner and real estate dealer of Somersville, Ky. Rev. H. M. Bannen of the Lutheran church, performed the ceremony. The bride was beautifully attired in poudre blue flat crepe, with white ensemble coat, hat and gloves, and pumps harmonizing.
She carried a gorgeous bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Mr. Bennett, before coming to Dixon, was engaged in the real estate business in Minneapolis, for some time. He served in the late World War, in the United States and overseas, and was engaged in some of the most severe battles, being wounded three times.

He was Sergeant in the First Platoon of the 36th Infantry of the 89th Division. Mr. Bennett has made many friends during his residence in Dixon, all of whom join Mrs. Bennett's hosts of friends in extending to them best wishes for every happiness.

Get Ready for the Canning Season Now

Now is the time for home-makers to look over their canning equipment and be sure that everything is in readiness for the fruits and vegetables as they come into season.

The home-canning of fruits and tomatoes presents few problems.
The hot-water bath canner, a "wa-terless cooker," a steamer, or a heat-controlled oven and the hot-pack method of canning insure good results. The hot-water bath canners and "waterless cookers" can be bought in most house-furnishing stores and are available in various sizes.

The home-canning of non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans, corn, spinach, and so forth involves a more difficult situation. It is almost impossible to effect adequate sterilization of these vegetables by the ordinary methods of canning.
State Universities all over the country as well as the United States Department of Agriculture recommend that all vegetables canned at home with the exception of tomatoes be canned in a steam pressure cooker.

Sterilize the Cans
There are certain steps which are the same for the canning of all fruits and vegetables.
The cans, rubbers and lids must be thoroughly sterilized before being packed with any product. Wash them in hot soapy water. Then put the lids into a big dish pan or the boiler of the hot-water bath can-ner. Put the cans on their sides, letting them rest on the lids and add cold water to cover. Bring to the boiling point and boil ten minutes. Add rubbers for just a minute.

It is not economy to try to use last year's rubbers. Buy the best rubbers on the market and plan to have a new rubber for each jar of fruit or vegetable to be canned.
When a can is to be half-sealed for processing turn the top as far as possible with the thumb and little finger. To seal completely after removing from oven, hot-water, bath or "waterless cooker" screw
the top down as tightly as possible.

Submerge in the Water Remember that the water must cover two inches when you are using the hot-water bath canner or the "waterless cooker."

If you are using an ordinary steamer the steam rises from below the jars, circulates around them and sterilizes the fruit. Of course there is no pressure in this kind of a steamer.

The steam pressure cooker sterilizes fruits, vegetables and meats by means of living steam in a kettle from which all air has been driven.

Choose Berries to Suit the Occasion

Strawberries for preserves must be chosen according to the kind of preserves you want to make. Old-fashioned strawberry jam is just as good made with small berries and those which have been sorted out from fine fruit wanted for canning and special preserving. Fine large berries are desirable for the superfine preserves every housekeeper likes to have on her shelves for resistive occasions.

At their best strawberries should be of medium size and of a bright red color. The color should be uniform—fading slightly toward the tip, perhaps, but not showing green.

Cook by Sunshine
Sunshine strawberry preserves are delicious and are easy to make.
Weigh fruit after hulling and washing and use three-fourths pound of fine granulated sugar to each pound of fruit. Put a layer of berries into smooth preserving kettle, cover with a layer of sugar and continue layer for layer until all is used. Let stand over night.
Remove scum as it rises and let boil gently for five minutes. Pour out onto large platters and cover with glass or mosquito netting. Place in the sun. Cook in the sun stirring occasionally until the syrup is thick. Twelve hours of direct hot sunshine will cook the fruit and juice to the desired thickness. Pour into sterilized glass jars and seal.
If glass is used to cover the fruit
it must be removed and dried frequently.

Strawberry preserves made according to the following rule are especially well flavored and retain their bright color. The preserve is deliciously thick, too.

Strawberry Preserves
One quart of berries, 4 cups granulated sugar.
Put 2 cups sugar over fruit in a smooth sauce pan and boil five minutes. Add remaining sugar and boil ten to fifteen minutes. A watery fruit will require the longer cooking time. Turn into an earthenware jar or deep crock—you can use your deepest mixing bowl if you have nothing else—and let stand 24 hours. Stir occasionally.
Seal cold in sterilized jars. The small quantity and the short cooking period are the secret of the de-liciousness of these preserves. Of course you understand that you can "do" as many quarts as the jar will hold, but only one quart must be cook at a time.

If two teaspoons lemon juice are added with the last 2 cups of sugar the berries will be a brighter red and the preserve will not be cloyingly sweet.

THE NAVY "GOES MORAL"
Admiral R. H. Leigh, commander in chief of the United States fleet, must be a man of an optimistic and sanguine turn of mind. His recent order that the practice of profane swearing be eliminated on all American naval vessels seems to be the sort of order that only a hopeful man would issue.
Sailors, of course, are not nowadays the tough, horny-handed chaps that the predecessors. Taken by and large, the young men of our navy are as fine a group as any man would care to see. But they do have vocabularies, and there seems to be something about a sailor's life which makes that necessary.
Take, for example, a busy coxswain engaged in bringing a motor launch up alongside a pier in a stiff cross wind against an adverse tide, with no one on the dock to take his lines but a couple of rookies who don't know a rope from a necktie. One shudders to think of the emotional strain he will suffer if he complies literally with Admiral Leigh's order.

HARBINGERS OF BUSINESS
The traveling man is more than just a part of a complex sales organization. He is a harbinger of busy times, an agent of good business; when he is on the road in force it is a safe bet that real prosperity is not far off.
It is interesting, therefore, to read the remarks made at Houston, Texas, recently by L. B. Carlson, national director of the Travelers' Protective Association.
"You will soon see traveling men back on the road, the forerunners of better business and removed commercial life," he said.
"In my round I find truly a feeling of optimism. Railroad car loadings are on the increase. Rail transportation companies are installing fast freights to handle the increased tonnage quickly. Men are going back to work. Aggressiveness and enthusiasm have supplanted pessimism."

SMALLER GIFTS TO COLLEGES
The day of great gifts to colleges and universities is just about over, if a recent appeal from President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University to Columbia alumni is taken as a criterion.
In this appeal President Butler urged support of the university through small gifts. In the past Columbia has been very fortunate in getting many large donations. But now, says President Butler:
"The great fortunes and the large accumulations which made these benefactions possible are either dissipated or destroyed. The economic and financial crises which grips the whole world has made their return quite impossible, certainly for a long time to come, if not forever."
The significance of his change to the privately-endowed institution of higher education could hardly be overestimated.

EVEN-HANDED JUSTICE
Judge Harry S. McDevitt of Philadelphia recently had before him a deputy city collector who had pleaded guilty to embezzlement. Instead of sending him to jail at once, Judge McDevitt remarked:
"I'll wait until I see what sentences those New York bankers who stole millions receive. Then I can give him a sentence in fair proportion to the time they'll have to spend in jail."
There is little doubt that this attitude will appeal immensely to the people in general. That sort of talk from the bench ought to do a great deal to re-establish confidence in the theory that big fish and little fish must fare alike when they fall into the net of the law.

Architecture is in a position of transition. In the boom period with its hurried, sensational stylistic attempts, only little has been done to find a fitting and beautiful expression for the changing aspects.—Dean George H. Egdel, Harvard School of Architecture.

If we adhere strictly to the theory that competition must continue, regardless of the fate of the producer, it may become so keen as to deprive him of any return on capital invested and deny a living wage to his employee.—Silas H. Strawn of Chicago.

American owned and operated ships are an American sales force that sees to it that American wheat and other farm products are transported and sold in foreign parts.—Rear Admiral Frederic R. Harris.

Public opinion is something that a politician builds up so that he will later be unable to resist it.—Dr. Arthur Irving, economist.

Most of them really have brains, but they are afraid to let people know it.—Mrs. K. van Cortlandt Suydam Rockefeller, of New York society, commenting on debutantes.

I'm free as a bird. I really think I'm freer than most birds.—Lillian Harvey, movie actress.

It isn't life that matters, but the courage that we bring into it.—Hugh Walpole, novelist.

As Duncy disappeared from sight, he said, "I hope I am all right. The elf declared this eagle was as strong as he could be."
"As long as I'm held in the air and we move onward, I don't care, but if I'm dropped, I know that it will be the end of me."
The other Tinies left behind, to Mister Elf said, "You are kind to help us try to find the girls. We'll pay you back some day."
Then Coppy said, "I'd like to know just where the eagle's going to go." The elf replied, "I'm only sure that it is on its way."

"My guess is, though, that it will race right to the monstrous giant's place. I have a hunch that your girl friends are prisoners in the house."
"If Duncy's clever, I'm sure he can find a way to set them free. I hope the lad is smart and sneaks up quiet as a mouse."
Far, far away the eagle flew, and hung on to wee Duncy, too. All of a sudden in the air a big, black bird appeared.
It dashed right for the eagle's head. "Hey, fight him off," scared Duncy said. "We've now run into trouble. That's exactly what a feared."

(Duncy goes down the chimney, in the next story.)

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States
By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON—The aside remark of Senator Glass of Virginia at the investigation of the House of Morgan by a Senate committee that "we should have a tent for this circus" is illustrative of the tremendous interest the public at large is taking in happenings on Capitol Hill these days.

Of course, the Morgan investigation probably would have drawn a huge crowd at any time. But the fact remains that all records for attendance at Senate investigations have been broken since Mr. Morgan took the stand.
Before the committee decided to shift the scene to the large marble caucus room of the Senate, the crowd made orderly progress of the hearing almost impossible. More than an hour before the hearing started every available seat in the

STANDING ROOM ONLY—
It used to be that a special attraction was necessary to bring the crowd out to the galleries. If Borah was scheduled for a speech, for example, they could always be expected in the Senate. Of if an important vote was pending after a long and fiery debate, they'd be there to see the finish.
Now they come regardless. The Senate was concerned for days with the trial of a California Federal Judge. For the most part it was a dreary and monotonous affair, the same as could be seen in any county court house. Attendance in the galleries didn't suffer. Seats were still at a premium.

Word of this thing called a "new deal" has gotten around pretty generally. And they're coming personally to see it worked out.

Everyday Religion

NOTHING TOO HIGH
By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton
Captain John Noel, in his thrilling "Story of Everest," tells of the final attempt to reach the storm-swept summit, and of the gallant death of Mallory and Irvine. Up and up into the blue they had gone, higher than men had ever gone before. Odell got a fleeting glimpse of them within six hundred feet from the summit, and they were still going up.

Then he saw nothing more. What happened? Nobody knows; they never returned. Hour after hour passed until the men were two days and night overdue, and hope was fading every hour. Suddenly the watchers saw figures on the crest of the ice cliff—Odell and his support returning to the camp. Their eyes were riveted to the top of the cliff.

At last they saw the men come out to the edge of the shelf, to give a signal. What would the signal be? Life or death? The men placed six blankets in the form of a cross, and went away. It was the signal of death. "We tried to make it different," says Noel; "but it was plainly a cross on the snow." So ended an attack as futile as it was fine.

Man does not give up, despite defeat and disaster; he tries for the top again. Dying or achieving, he thus gives proof of the shining splendor of his soul, which accepts the challenge of the highest. As we read in the ancient book of Ecclesiastical: "He was not moved by death, no one brought him into subjection, nothing was too high for him."

Be it the top of Mt. Everest, or the more dizzy peak of the Sermon on the Mount, we dare not admit defeat. Greece dreamed of a world of beauty and culture, Rome of a world ordered under law, Judea of a world obedient to the will of God; and Jesus of a world brotherhood serving a divine Father. In spite of set-back after set-back, man cannot desire less, nor can he abandon his high dream.

We, too, are of this daring, climbing breed—if we lose the lure of the heights we lose our souls. Not defeat, but low aim, is failure. Mallory and Irvine died heroically in mist and snow, but again today another party is assailing Everest. Man must die climbing!

ducted by the president, Mrs. Emma Truckenbrod, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Andrew Long, who presented a very interesting lesson upon the subject "Character Building." She divided the subject into three main divisions, namely: I. Adult Study, at which time Mrs. Andrew presented a book review of the book, "As a Man Thinketh," by Allen. This book is very thought provoking and everyone was very much interested. II. Child Study, which was opened by Mrs. Ella Hatch reading an article from the Delineator, followed by another article read by Mrs. Barton upon the subject, "Should Our Boys and Girls Go to Sunday School?" Mrs. Andrew Long then impressed upon the minds of those present that environment played an important part in character building. The last division of Mrs. Andrew Long's talk was a group of poems, read by her. In connection with the thought of the lesson Mrs. Ralph Long then rendered a beautiful solo, "Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters." Roll was called at which time each member responded with a famous soldier. The editorial was read by Mrs. Helen Long entitled "Until It's Too Late."

Muldoon at 44

William Muldoon, the old professor of the New York Boxing Commission, turned the page of his 88th year the other day. When July comes it will mark the passing of 44 years since the old professor helped John L. Sullivan to beat Jake Kilrain in 75 rounds at Richmond, Miss.

Helped Sullivan? The old professor more than helped Sullivan. My books say that the old professor won the fight himself, and it was a victory of mind over matter purely and simply.

Sullivan a Wreck

It was just about 44 years ago this time when Muldoon hauled Sullivan out of a sick-bed where the Boston Boy had been lying at the point of death from typhoid fever. Sullivan didn't look so good, as the boys would say now, when the old professor gave him a rope to skip. The Sullivan legs were wobbly from illness, and the paunch hadn't been helped by John's all-around habits. In addition John L. was mentally sick.

Muldoon had to be a professor to get the Boston Boy into shape. He would talk to John L. by the hour of how fearful would be the consequences if Kilrain should win this one. He literally had to overpower Sullivan mentally to get him to work.

Knocked Him Around

After Sullivan began to reach some kind of fighting shape, his self-conceit began to assert itself. Muldoon took this out of him by wrestling—tossing John L. around like a bean bag.

When he first gave Sullivan the rope, John could not skip more than a dozen times. Before Muldoon was through with him, the Boston Boy was hopping over the camp as many as 800 times. Muldoon was given credit for doing what no other man could have done for Sullivan. He made John L. lick himself. After that Kilrain, in 75 rounds, was not so hard.

TIGERS FORCED TO DEPEND UPON TWO BOX ARTISTS

Bridges And Rowe Seem Only Ones Able To Come Through

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Detroit's chances of getting out of the American League's second division look mighty slim but as long as they can pin their faith on Tommy Bridges and Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the Tigers are hard to beat.

Bridges already has two one-hit games to his credit this season while Rowe, the big 21-year-old "freshman" right hander, now appears to be living up to the training camp hallyhoo.

The six-foot, four-inch, 205 pound "schoolboy" put it over the veteran Ted Lyons and the slugging Chicago White Sox yesterday to win 3-1 and bring his mound record up even with three victories and three defeats. He gave only five singles, fanned five and pitched shutout ball after the first innings. The Tigers also were limited to five base hits but bunched them neatly with walks for their runs.

Ferrell Delivered

Wesley Ferrell, Cleveland's Ace, came through with a three hit game to give the fourth-place Indians a 3 to 1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns and increase their margin over the White Sox to 1½ games. His principal difficulty came with Debs Garms, who walked four times.

The last place Boston Red Sox, blanked by Bill McAfee for six innings, came through in the eighth to score four times and tie the count, then added two more runs off Al Thomas in the thirteenth to beat Washington 7-5. The Yankees and Athletics had an open date.

The St. Louis Cardinals climaxed an almost uninterrupted climb from seventh place in the National League standings to first with a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs. It put them just four points ahead of the idle Pittsburgh Pirates.

Dean Stops Cubs

Dizzy Dean's six-hit pitching was the most important factor in the Cards' seventh straight triumph but his mates pounded Guy Bush lustily, received the benefit of five errors and put the game away with a four run rally in the seventh.

The New York Giants continued their unbroken string of victories over the Phillies by winning the other National League game 7-2 as Fred Fitzsimmons settled after a bad start and yielded only one hit in the last six innings.

Cold weather forced postponement of the Brooklyn-Boston double-header, leaving the Dodgers with

Dixon Is Winner Over Rochellers

A delegation of members of the Rochelle Country Club spent a most enjoyable afternoon and evening yesterday at the Dixon Country Club. The local hosts were winners in the inter-club match play during the afternoon by a score of 11 to 9. Tom Stokes' card of 80 was the low score for the day. At the close of play the guests were tendered a chicken dinner. The Dixon golfers will play a return game at Rochelle later in the season.

SCHMELING HAS ADOPTED A NEW STYLE DEFENSE

Teuton Will Show New Upright Posture Thursday Eve

Lake Swannanoa, N. J., June 2.

(AP)—A great change has come over the fighting style of Max Schmeling, the young German whose tenure as heavyweight champion was the shortest in modern ring history.

The ring worms who look for a crouching, weaving model of the Jack Dempsey he resembles only in facial mould, seem certain to be shocked at the new Schmeling posture when the calm young Teuton tackles Max Baer in the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

Acting on word from the training camp of the reckless young Californian in Atlantic City that Baer plans a rushing, punching head-long fight on the advice of no less than Dempsey himself, Schmeling has adopted a more erect stance, is stressing defense and until the night of the fight at least, has abandoned his old crouching forcing tactics.

Stressing New Style

He is stressing this style in his final workouts with the battered sparring partners who have been working with him in the luxurious country club surroundings on Lake Swannanoa for the past five weeks. He has but three more days of boxing, Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday, before breaking camp Thursday morning to head for the weighing in and the fight in New York that night.

Yesterday, for instance, he stood erect through six rounds with his mates, dodging, blocking, feigning as they carried the fight to him much as he expects Baer to do.

Particularly did he watch for sweeping left hooks of the type the burly Baer heaves to the head. One sparring partner, Barney Baker, let one go and Schmeling, pulling inches out of the way, crossed his right to the jaw. Despite the sixteen ounce padding of the training gloves, Baker fell flat on his face and was helpless for several seconds though he managed to blunder through the remainder of his two-round stunt.

BAER IMPROVED

Atlantic City, N. J., June 2 —(AP)—So much has Max Baer impressed competent boxing critics in recent workouts the big Californian may step into the ring against Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night at close to even money in the betting.

Several Californian experts who had not seen Baer in action for more than a year dropped into town yesterday and expressed amazement over the tremendous improvement he showed both on offense and defense. It was, as a matter of fact, one of the best exhibitions he has given. He stepped in close and whaled away viciously at seal Harris and Pete Wisnort and both were in trouble. He was in deadly earnest for almost the first time since he arrived here.

Levinsky To Seek Revenge This Eve

Chicago, June 2 —(AP)—Karl Levinsky, glorified ex-fish peddler, will attempt to test his knock-out punch on the chin of Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, heavyweight, in a ten-round battle Mills Stadium, opening the outdoor boxing season, tonight.

The contest involves the bitterest ring feud that has developed in Chicago since boxing was legalized seven years ago. Two years ago Griffiths, then at the peak of his career, gave Levinsky, then a novice, a boxing lesson and took down a purse of $25,000.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY ATTACKS LACK OF POLICY

Speaker Decries the Need Of American Leadership In Parley

London, June 2 —(AP)—The Labor Party attacked Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and the government in the House of Commons today for allowing the world economic conference initiative to "go to the United States."

Sir Stafford Cripps, Labor spokesman, demanded:

"Are we only to follow the suggestions made by Mr. Roosevelt, who undoubtedly is a very remarkable man? It is necessary for him to have a monopoly on initiative for the world economic conference?"

"Hasn't the British government any ideas of their own or are they just prepared to follow along with the suggestions Mr. Roosevelt gave Prime Minister MacDonald?"

The Labor attack was launched in the course of a foreign affairs debate in which Mr. Chamberlain had asserted that unless the nations temper their prejudices and adopt a give-and-take attitude at the economic conference, the world may despair "of emerging in our time from depression, hardships and suffering."

War Debts Discussed

The war debts to the United States played a part in the discussion, the Chancellor once again refusing to disclose the British policy, intimating that the government awaited a new move from Washington.

Sir Stafford declared that the British people would at one time have held up their hands in horror at the idea of repudiating the American war debt but "now they talk with complete equanimity of not paying June 15."

The Labor spokesman complained that twelve days before payment was due all the British government had to say was that America was in full possession of the British view.

He declared that it would have been better weeks ago for the British to have risked upsetting feelings in the United States by firmly and decisively stating the British view. An installment of

Main Objectives

Chancellor Chamberlain, giving great emphasis to the necessity of reviving world trade, expressed the belief this revival depended upon acceptance of the three main objectives of the world parley. He outlined these objectives thus:

First, raising the world price levels.
 Second, currency understandings leading eventually to restoration of a stable international money standard.

"Necessity drives us all," he said. "All of us realize that even now, after the tremendous shrinkage of international trade which has not yet ceased, that unless we can put aside something of our prejudices, unless each of us in prepared to give something in order to secure agreement, if, in short, this conference fails to achieve its purpose amid the expectations and hopes of all the world, then indeed it would be well that the conference never was called and we might despair of emerging in our own time from depression, hardships and suffering, from which we hope the conference may deliver us."

MORGAN JOKES ABOUT MIDGET PICTURE STUNT

Financier Made No Objection To Circus Advertising

Washington, June 2 —(AP)—An air of joviality between J. P. Morgan and his associates and members of the Senate investigating committee prevailed before today's session started, as they joked over the incident of a midget being put on Morgan's lap yesterday.

"It was an unfortunate occurrence," Morgan told Chairman Fletcher, "but I don't blame the photographers."

"I don't want to stand in the attitude of knocking me out of their jobs. I haven't been used to advertise a circus."

He was laughing and gesticulating. Members of the banking group told Senators it was not their wish to exclude the photographers, and that the decision was up to the committee.

Morgan said he did not care whether they were permitted to enter or not, that he did not want to interfere.

Nevertheless, Fletcher required that cameras be left outside the hearing room for the present.

Senator Adams of Colorado said afterward the photographers were to be given a day off and then readmitted.

TOO MUCH HOLD UP IS TOO MUCH SAYS ZEPP0 MARX

Second Robbery Within Six Months Irsome To Film Comedian

Los Angeles, June 2 (AP)—Zeppo Marx, of the Marx Brothers comedians, figures too much robbery is too much.

He was shy today the following articles of jewelry: a platinum ring set with a 12-carat stone, and valued at $12,000; a platinum bracelet set with rubies and diamonds, valued at same amount; a pair of platinum clasps, diamond set, worth $4,000; and a $200 platinum pin set with diamonds.

That was the haul of a brace of holdup men who politely invaded the sumptuous Marx apartment here last night, covered Zeppo, his wife, a guest and a maid with weapons and rifled Mrs. Marx's jewel cases.

It wouldn't have been so bad if the same stunt hadn't been pulled in the Marx's absence about five months ago when the loot was $37,800.

"I'm tired," said Zeppo, "tired of being robbed."

He obtained no description of the robbers.

"No, I had a gun in the middle of my back during the entire visit."

The guest, Allan Miller of New York, had arrived in Los Angeles only an hour before the robbery. He and the maid were bound and gagged, and Marx and his wife were locked in the clothes closet.

After the men departed, Marx managed to open the door of the closet and notified police. The loss was covered by insurance.

Police surmised that the robbers were members of the same ring which robbed other film players in the last few months, including Helene Costello, Mae West and Betty Compson.

A BOOK A DAY

SOLVES A MURDER THAT HAS NO CLUE

A new kind of farthest north in detective fiction seems to be provided by "A Case for Mr. Paul Cavor," by Jackson Gregory.

Mr. Savoy, a wealthy amateur student of crime, remarks that clues really get in a detective's way. The more clues there are, the harder a murder is to solve. So late proceeds to drop in his lap a murder in which there are no clues whatever — and our Mr. Savoy solves it by pure reasoning.

The clueless murder is discovered when someone flags a night hawk asleep in the small hours at a San Francisco pier and finds that the back seat contains a murdered man, stark naked and quite unidentifiable. Eleven days pass and the man's name remains unknown. The police have a corpse—and not one solitary fact to go on.

So, as I say, Mr. Savoy steps in and straightens things out. The book is immensely ingenious, as you can imagine. Unfortunately, it fails to be very convincing, however we can't have everything. "Hanging Waters," by Keith

West is also something new in detective fiction. Here we have a youthful Chinese who leaves his mother's farm to go and live with an uncle in one of China's treaty ports, and who stumbles into a murder in his uncle's house. The story, perhaps, doesn't really classify as a detective story at all; but whatever it is it is pleasantly told, and it provides good entertainment.

A population of 1500 is required before a village in the United States is entitled to have a mail carrier; all houses must have receptacles, the sidewalks paved, the streets named and the annual receipts of the post office must be at least $5,000.

AMUSEMENTS

One of the outstanding features exhibited during the Century of Progress in Chicago, will be the special World's Fair showing of the huge war spectacle, "Forgotten Men," in Orchestra Hall. There being no available space for the exhibition of "Forgotten Men" inside the Fair grounds, it was necessary to use Orchestra Hall for that purpose.

Orchestra Hall, on Michigan Boulevard, at Adams street, is directly opposite the Century of Progress Art Exhibit from foreign countries, in the Chicago Art Institute.

"Forgotten Men" is a complete and authentic picturization of the activities of every nation, participating in the great World War. It was assembled and produced by Samuel Cummins, who spent the last ten years in securing his material. During this time he visited all corners of the world, and secured films of scenes of action from World War Veterans of every nationality. Many of these were being preserved by the veterans, or their families, and now have ever been shown in public. The most startling scenes are films secured from the archives of 11 countries, suppressed until recently, when the world-wide agitation for disarmament made it possible for Mr. Cummins to secure these hitherto unpublished records of the world's greatest catastrophe. How he secured them is his own secret, but out of all his labor and research came this masterpiece of realism, "Forgotten Men."

Today, "Forgotten Men" stands as a complete visual record of the parts played by all nations in the World War, as well as a true indictment of war and its attendant misery and tragedy. Battles of land and sea, and in the clouds, hand-to-hand fighting, bayonet killing, liquid fire searing human flesh, poison gas, hundreds of tanks moving ponderously into action, monster ships sent to the bottom by submarines, all this is truthfully recorded in "Forgotten Men."

The latest improvements in sound equipment have been installed in Orchestra Hall, and no expense was spared to give a proper setting for the special World's Fair presentation of "Forgotten Men." Showings will be continuous daily from 10 o'clock A. M. until midnight, to afford Fair visitors ample opportunity of witnessing this novel and unforgettable exhibit at popular prices.

PRINTERS WALK OFF OF URBANA- CHAMPAIGN JOBS

Two Papers Forced To Cut Editions: Third
Has Suspended

Urbana, Ill., June 2—(AP)—With their regular printers out on strike, makeshift staffs of two Urbana and Champaign newspapers went to work in the composing rooms today to publish regular editions while a third paper, the Daily Illini, suspended publication.

The strike resulted from failure of the publishers of the Urbana Courier and the Champaign News-Gazette to reach an agreement with the local of the International Typographical Union over wage rates following expiration of their contract, and was called yesterday noon.

The old contract, providing for hourly rates of $1.13 and $1.10 expired May 1, and pending negotiations toward formation of a new one the men received at rate of 73 and 70 cents.

A. T. Burrows, publisher of the Courier, said a committee of the men presented him with a new contract they had drawn up shortly before the strike was called and told him "to take it or leave it." While he did not reveal its contents he said it was unable to accept it.

A few minutes later the strike was called and the men left their jobs, forcing the Courier to reduce its edition from 12 to eight pages and the News-Gazette to appear in 16 pages. Both papers reported to copy already in type to fill their columns as reporters tried their hand at making up forms.

E. C. Blau, editor of the News-Gazette, said the strike would not cause suspension of publication and that a crew of non-union men from Chicago would take the places of the strikers today.

In defense of the printers, Guy Castelo, president of the union local, accused the publishers of taking advantage of the men by refusing to keep the old wage scale in effect during negotiations for the new contract.

Announcement that the Daily Illini, student newspaper of the University of Illinois, would not appear today was made by Victor Krannert, manager of the Illini Publishing Company, following an extended conference between strikers and publishers late last night during which they failed to reach an agreement.

THREE-CORNERED RACE MONDAY IS ALONE IN STATE

Justice Heard's Rivals
Lack Experience Of Veteran Jurist

Rockford, Ill., June 2—(AP)—Voters in the nominally Republican Sixth District Monday will have before them a Democrat, a Republican and an Independent in the state Supreme Court election.

The Sixth District is the only one having a three-cornered race, and the only one in which an opposed incumbent is seeking reelection.

Republicans chose Chief Justice Oscar E. Heard again to make the race. His home is at Freeport.

A brief outline of the careers of the candidates follows:

Justice Heard—Born in Freeport. Attended the public schools there and later Northwestern University. His first elective office was that of Justice of the Peace in 1884, a position he held for four years.

From the Justice court he was elevated to the position of State's Attorney for Stephenson county, serving for 16 years. Later he became Circuit Judge and served until his election to the high court in 1924. From 1919 until 1924 Judge Heard was a member of the Second and Third District Appellate Courts.

Justice Heard's wife died several years ago. He has a son and a daughter, both living in Freeport.

No Judicial Experience
Elwyn R. Shaw—Democratic leader and lawyer, Shaw was nominated by acclamation to make the Supreme Court race. The only public office he has held has been that of member of the Board of Education at Freeport, his home.

Born on a farm in Whiteside county, 45 years ago, he attended the University of Michigan, went to Freeport and entered the law office of Judge William N. Conkrite. His first Circuit Court case, he said, was heard by Judge Heard, his present opponent. Shaw enjoys a good reputation as a trial lawyer, an able leader, and has met success in corporation law.

He is married and has two daughters.

Rockford Independent
Judge George T. Liddell—While running as an Independent, Judge Liddell is considered by his friends at Rockford where he lives to be an Independent Republican.

About 46 years old, Judge Liddell has had a varied career embracing law, the ministry and newspaper work.

For a number of years he worked on various newspapers over the United States, later became a Methodist minister, and was admitted to the bar in 1915. He served some time as Winnebago County Judge.

His campaign has been a plea to "take the Supreme Court out of politics."

Judge Liddell's supporters say he is the first man ever to make the Supreme Court race in Illinois on an independent ticket.

DARLING FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful, snail for Europe as the companion of MISS ANSTICE COREY, an old friend. Monnie is trying to forget DAN CARDIGAN, believing he has lifted her for SANDRA LAWRENCE. Sandra, pretending to be Monnie's friend, has been trying to win him from her. Dan's parents who took down upon Monnie because the O'Dares are poor favor the match with Sandra.

In London ARTHUR MACKENZIE, rich, middle-aged New Yorker, asks Monnie to marry him. Before she has given him her answer she receives a letter from Dan explaining his neglect and begging her to forgive him. Monnie decides to return home, taking the first boat. Mackenzie, who has been called back to New York on business, sails at the same time.

Meanwhile in Belvedere, Monnie's home, to which she reports that Sandra and Dan are engaged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XL

THE train slowed. Monnie, marshalling her forces and making certain her bags were all in order, felt a curious surge of excitement.

She was home! Home at last after the long ocean voyage, the dash across New York to make the morning train to Belvedere. Arthur Mackenzie had been everything that was kind and thoughtful. Monnie had felt, on leaving him, a pang of compunction. It seemed unfair that she should be able to give him nothing in return.

"Write me," he had said, holding her hand, on parting. "If anything goes wrong—if things don't fall out as you expect." And Monnie had promised lightly. Why should anything go wrong now? She and Dan would be reconciled. They would be married directly after Christmas when his uncle's legacy set him free. She had no fears now. All the way seemed to be clear for her. The trip already seemed like an agreeable dream.

No one knew she was coming. She had not wired—she had thought she would surprise them all. It was strange, arriving on the platform with no one to greet her. Strange and exciting, too. Old Marley Brockway who drove the "Rapid Fire Taxi" took her bags, looking at her a bit curiously, she thought.

"Been away, I see." That was old Marley, always. As if you'd be getting off the train otherwise. Monnie said yes.

"Folks know you was comin'?" She shook her head.

The ancient automobile rattled along Main street. Monnie felt self-conscious, riding alone. How strange to see the town exactly as she had left it five weeks ago! Nothing had changed. What should she say to her mother—to Kay—about her sudden return? They would think it extremely odd. Well, she was in for that now, for all the explanations. They would be glad to see her and so perhaps would not ask too many questions. After she had satisfied them she would let Dan know she was back. Dan! Every man on the street, walking in her direction, might be Dan!

OLD Marley seemed inclined to gossip. Driving cautiously along, he threw comments over his shoulder.

"Big excitement in town last night."

"There was?" Monnie wasn't really listening. She knew Marley and his "big excitement." Probably a dog fight.

"Yes, sir! Accident on the river road. People all bunged up." Marley clucked dolefully.

"Really?" Monnie was thinking of her mother—what she would say to her.

"Took 'em to the hospital," the cabman related with relish. "Hurt bad, I guess."

She listened with her thoughts far away. Once as the car took a corner cautiously she thought she saw a little group staring at her curiously. It was the usual crowd of never-do-wells who hung around the fire engine house. Monnie shrugged her shoulders. The news of her return would soon be all about town.

"Mebbe you know 'em. Fact is, I'm sure you do," old Marley was droning on. "They was—"

The victims of the accident were the girl was destined not to know just then, as a milk wagon, drawn by a nervous horse, dashed across the path of the cab and Marley was too upset by the incident to chatter further. In another minute Monnie alighted at her own door.

She tried the knob, found the door locked and used the knocker vigorously. After an instant steps sounded and her mother appeared. Her eyes widened.

"Monnie! What on earth? You're not sick?"

"Never that!" Monnie embraced the small figure with vigor. "I'm fine and I've had a wonderful time! But I thought I'd loafed long enough—"

"But Miss Anstice?" Mrs. O'Dare's brow wrinkled anxiously. "She found those old friends of hers in London and is going to see lots of them. She didn't mind."

It wasn't many mothers, Monnie reflected, who would ask so few questions as hers. Mrs. O'Dare appeared satisfied with the vague explanation though no doubt she was thinking her own thoughts.

"We've got a pick-up supper," she worried. "Nothing like what I would have had if I'd known you were coming."

THE girl laughed joyously. This was getting home—having mother worry about what you ate and how you looked. She had missed it—oh, how she had missed it! The shabby little house, warm and cozy, the deep chairs, the books under the lamp. How familiar and yet how strange it all looked after the salons and cafes! Monnie wondered fleetingly what Arthur Mackenzie would have thought or her home. Then she tossed her head!

"Kay will be here soon," Mrs. O'Dare told her. "Mark's working at the Boston store. I told you that when I wrote, didn't I? He runs errands after school. He's saving his money for Christmas."

"And Bill?" Monnie was almost afraid to ask about Bill. Maybe he had gone off and married Angie while she'd been away.

"Bill is like a different person these days," said Monnie's mother. Her face lightened. "He's—Monnie, I must tell you! It's all off between him and Angie."

"Not really?" Monnie was incredulous. The mother nodded.

"Yes, Angie went back to her husband two weeks ago. She'd been acting rather queerly lately. When Bill called she was never in. Do you know, Monnie, I really think she cared about Bill and that she decided this was the best way out for them all? She knows Stan—that's her husband's name—has a vicious temper and that he'd make trouble for her. He never wanted to let her go, really, and had threatened Bill. You don't know how relieved I am about it all, although I'm sorry for the poor little thing! Angie really has some fine qualities."

"So that's one more mountain turned into a molehill," Monnie murmured, fluffing her hair before the hall mirror. "How I worried about that situation all summer, thinking Bill's life would be spoiled by such a marriage! You say he's taking it all right?"

"Yes, I think he's really relieved, deep down," the mother explained. "He was infatuated with Angie at first. She is pretty! And then the excitement of knowing she was for-bidden fruit, another man's wife, kept up the feeling. You know how Bill is! Stubborn as a mule. He got the idea Angie was being mistreated and that he was her champion. When we accepted her—that what could we do?—the thrill wore off. He wasn't really in love with her and seeing her all the time quite casually rubbed off the bloom."

"You're a wise woman," Monnie marveled. "You see through all of us."

KAY burst in, interrupting this colloquy. Kay in a brown suit with a green beret set saucily on the side of her bright curls.

"You wretch!" Kay was exclaiming. "Barging in like this without letting us know!"

"I thought you liked surprises," Kay's eyes flicked to her mother's.

Monnie saw the quick frown and shake of the head her mother gave in return. Curiosity rose in a tide. "Heard what? What have you been keeping from me?"

"It's nothing," Her mother spoke almost apologetically. "Nothing you ought to be greeted with on your arrival home at any rate."

"Bad news?" Monnie's heart began to beat fast.

GOOD THOUGHTS

And behold, one came and said unto Him, Good Master, What good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful; for he had great possessions.

—Matthew 19

If one were to enumerate his possessions, his first thought might be to list only the material objects and the financial assets which he calls his own. But if one were to think more deeply there would invariably come the realization that the real substance of all that he is or has, is to be found in the mental realm.

—The Christian Science Monitor

My purse is very slim, and very few the acres that I number; But I am seldom stupid, never blue, My riches are an honest heart and true,

And quiet slumber.

—Epes Sargent

Wouldst thou multiply thy riches? diminish them wisely; or wouldst thou make thy estate entire? divide it charitably. Seeds that are scattered increase; but hoarded up, they perish.

Our material possessions, like our joys, are enhanced in value by being shared.

ASHTON NEWS

By E. Tilton

Ashton — Fair skies and warm breezes made Memorial Day one which invited Ashton folks to mingle with one another at the services held on the school lawn at two o'clock. Leading the procession to the school were the American Legion, followed by the Ashton Band.

Arriving at the school, the program commenced with a musical number by the Wisman quartet. Rae Chadwick read the "roll of honor" and Rev. F. W. Henke, pastor of the St. John's Lutheran church, pronounced the invocation.

The address of the afternoon was given by the Rev. C. D. Wilson, pastor of the M. E. church. Rev. Wilson stressed the point that we hold Memorial Day services to show that our spirits are in tune and vibrating with those of our brave soldiers, dead and living.

Switzerland, the only nation never to have felt the hand of a tyrant for more than six hundred years, honor the men who bravely defended their country.

Rev. Wilson emphasized the very important idea that while it is true that we should show our appreciation of our brave dead, our obligation does not cease there but must be renewed in our obligation to the living and the generations to come. Wealth, power, commercial learning, military power, are not the essential marks of a great nation. Many nations which were possessed of these have been obliterated. The enduring and sustaining factors of a nation are its unseemly characteristics of honor, truth, industry, loyalty and integrity. Many enemies of these exist and must be met boldly and bravely, that our nation may continue to be a nation among all nations.

The Wisman quartet sang, "Sleep Soldier, Sleep," and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. H. Johnson. Earl Pierce, Marshall of the Day, directed the line of march to the cemetery where prayer was said by the Rev. P. O. Bailey, pastor of the Evangelical church.
